1. I would like to take this opportunity to express my appreciation for your having made [redacted] available to give a talk on Communism at a meeting of the Institute of Internal Auditors on 24 January 1956.

2. [redacted] gave a very interesting and excellently presented talk on Communism and allowed forty-five minutes for questions. He was enthusiastically received and judging by the rapidity with which questions were submitted it appears that the period could have been extended indefinitely.

3. This was the third talk of this kind given by a member of your staff at my request and as I have indicated to you before, I was again extremely impressed with the keen interest of the audience and I am more convinced each time that this type of presentation to groups of this kind is very beneficial.

4. Please convey to [redacted] my appreciation for his time and the very excellent presentation.
